USES

Garden Design

Stoneballs can be used both in traditional and in modern, minimalist garden designs - creating bold focal points and providing perfect contrast to plants, shrubs, trees, and lawns. Gravelled areas can be visually broken up by placing the balls as accentuation points. Some of our customers have used them in Knot gardens - others in Japanese style layouts. By drilling through and inserting a pipe, the balls can easily be turned into water features which will complement both modern and traditional design.

Heritage Homes and Gardens

Hand crafted and made of durable solid sandstone, the balls will withstand inclement weather and will gradually age to a distinctive antique finish which suits the historical environment.

Owners of historic heritage homes and gardens such as Belvoir Castle in Leicestershire, are amongst our customers who appreciate the opportunity to use a natural and authentic material - not moulded or composite but hand crafted in a traditional way from solid stone.

Stone balls can also play an important role in traffic management and the problems of vehicle damage to verges and buildings

English Heritage

'Stone spheres can be an attractive traditional alternative to conventional bollards.'

Gateways and finials

Many of our customers have used the balls as gate finials to add distinction to entranceways.

The balls can simply be fixed to brick piers or onto pier caps.

Excellent as replacements for antique missing/stolen balls.

Fixing is easily achieved by drilling and inserting a short dowel into the ball and pier and fixing with adhesive.

(For a small extra charge we can provide balls pre-drilled with a metal dowel.)

Modern Interiors

Artfully placed stoneballs can enhance modern minimalist interior decor (as featured in Elle Decore magazine) and can be in keeping with a corporate setting or the home. (A film production company has used our balls in an interior makeover programme shown on the BBC.).

We have small sizes to grace side tables or hearths - in both sandstone for a muted effect and marble.
